Our parish school admits students of any race, color, national and ethnic origin to all the rights, privileges, programs and activities generally accorded or made available to students at our school. Similar policies apply to the school staff. Our school does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national and ethnic origin in the administration of its educational policies, its admission policies, or in any school-administered program.

From a letter we received earlier this summer from Kevin Barr, Program Director of St. John's Hospice:

Dear Friends at St. Luke Church,
Thank you for your donation from your Fathers Day Collection.

Summer has arrived and renews a hope in all our residents and guests at St. John's Hospice. The natural change of season can inspire a desire for personal transformation in the residents of our shelter programs at St. John's, Good Shepherd, the Coffee House Program and the hundreds of Day Services clients who visit us daily for a shower, clothing, a meal, and many other brief services. Inspiration to change is never in short supply at St. John's. From the volunteers with their acts of service and love for the poor to our donors, who like yourself, gift us with the means to continue this good work among the homeless, to the men who successfully complete the program and challenge one another to change, to the grace of God who is the source of all we do, St. John's is a place of growth and conversion.

We can only hope that our gratitude, to you, all our benefactors and to a providential God, can match the generosity we experience and share with those we serve.

Our next regular Donation Day for St. John's Hospice is Monday. For recipes visit

The Year of St. Paul

June, 2008 — June, 2009

"The Apostle of the Gentiles, who dedicated himself to the spreading of the good news to all peoples, spent himself for the unity and harmony of all Christians. May he guide us in this bimillenary celebration, helping us to advance in the humble and sincere search for the full unity of all the members of the mystical body of Christ."

Pope Benedict XVI

the 1st letter to the Corinthians

Introduction by Nicholas King, for Catholic Bishops' Conference of England and Wales

Corinth was a funny old place. It was a port city with all the vices and virtues of such places. It was socially very diverse, with a high proportion of slaves and ex-slaves; and it was international. The city lay on an important trunk route between the East and Rome, where all commerce eventually tended to find its way. It was hard-nosed, street-wise, and (at least by reputation) sexually uninhibited; so you would not predict success for a Christian missionary there. Not surprisingly, Paul tells us that he arrived "in fear and in much trembling" after (according to Acts 17) a minor disaster in Athens, which must have seemed a far more likely place than Corinth to be receptive to his message.

Surprisingly enough, he found a ready hearing in Corinth, possibly because he quickly formed a relationship with two Jewish Christians, tent-makers like himself, the husband and wife team of Aquila and Priscilla. He stayed there 18 months and then kept in contact with the church he had founded in Corinth after he had moved on. The reason for the contact was that the Corinthian Christians had not really grasped what he was about and tended (at least when Paul was not present among them) to despise him for not being a clever enough speaker and not having enough "knowledge". They wrote him a slightly self-satisfied letter, and we can imagine them waiting complacently for his admiring reply. What they got must have shaken them greatly: they are told that they were not "wise... powerful... of noble birth", but "weak... low and despised... and things that are not". There were several problems among the Church in Corinth; but the main one was simply that they were divided, and for Paul, Christianity is not Christianity if it is divided. So it is in this letter that, for the first time, Paul sketches his famous image of the Church as the "body of Christ": all of whose parts belong together, none of which is superior to the other.

We can imagine their shock when, instead of responding admiringly to their self-praise, Paul makes them wait a whole seven chapters (almost halfway through the letter) before condescending to answer their letter. Instead, he lays into them for forming factions (especially a Paul versus Apollos faction) for immaturity, for permitting incest, for litigation against each other, and for fornication. Picture the situation as this letter was read out loud; listen to the shocked silence in the room where the church gathered, and try to reconstruct what it must have been like to hear that powerful tirade let loose upon them.

When he finally comes to answering their questions, he makes it clear that they are not the important questions that they should have been asking. Though he has quite strong views on sexual morality, relations with other religions, and on whether it is permissible to eat food offered to idols (which was the cheapest way to get access to meat), what really counted were the things that divided them. This was what made questions about sex and meat-eating important; and this was what gave the edge to a question about what women should wear when praying or prophesying (and we notice, in passing, that Paul makes no distinction between the liturgical functions of women and men). What Paul will not have at any price (and here he once again shatters their complacency) is anything that divides the People of God. It is not, he bellows, the Lord's supper if some people start eating early, while others go hungry; nor if some people speak in tongues which others cannot understand. What counts is telling the truth about Jesus, and, most especially, telling the truth that Jesus is risen from the dead. It is an extraordinary letter, written for particular purposes nearly two thousand years ago, but, echoing down the centuries, still as fresh as the day when it was written.

The 1st letter to the Corinthians in the Sunday Lectionary

The letter is proclaimed at the beginning of Ordinary Time in each of the three cycles:

A chapters 1–4 (Sundays 2–8); B chapters 6–11 (Sundays 2–6); C chapters 12–15 (Sundays 2–8).

read and reflect on 1st Corinthians

1. In what ways does Paul stress the unity of the believers in 1 Cor. 12:12-14?
2. From the references to “wisdom” in 1 Cor. 2:6-9, what differences do you see between human wisdom and God’s wisdom?
3. What in this letter has helped and/or challenged you?

O God, *teach us the hidden wisdom of the gospel,
so that we may hunger and thirst for holiness, work tirelessly for peace, and be counted among those who seek first the blessedness of your kingdom. Amen.*

RESPECT LIFE THOUGHT:

The right to life is the greatest civil rights issue of our time. This is the issue that will determine whether America remains a hospitable society – committed to caring for women in crisis and their unborn children, committed to caring for those with special needs, committed to caring for the elderly and the dying – or whether America betrays our heritage and the truths on which its Founders staked their claim to independence.
