Dear Parishioners,

Mid-August begins a very busy time and also another transitional time. Fall sports programs will begin practices and everyone will be gearing up for the beginning of another school year. Many of our college students are heading back to school or ready to begin their years in college. We assure all the college students of our prayerful support, especially the freshmen beginning at new colleges, and possibly away from home for the first time. At the same time we remind you, the college students, that you must be responsible in your behavior as you become young adults. We wish you all the best. We are proud of all of you. We thank you for being with us this summer. Please keep God in your life through prayer and Mass while you are away at school. We will also be welcoming the students from Arcadia in the next few weeks and are always happy that they join us and encourage them to get involved in St. Luke’s, if interested.

This week is the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, a holyday of obligation. Our Masses for the holyday will be Monday, 5:00 Vigil Mass, Tuesday, 6:30 and 8:30 am, and 7:00 pm. I encourage you to remember this important day and attend Mass. If you are lucky enough to be away at the beach or other resort area, many communities have feasts and blessings of the water in connection with this summer holyday in honor of Mary.

Some of us still have some vacation to enjoy and others may have day or weekend “get aways” planned. Enjoy these closing weeks of summer -- family time and relaxation. Stay close to God and God will be close to you. Remember your prayers and the importance of attending Mass.

Be assured of my prayers for all of you as I depend on and thank you for your prayers and continued kindness and support.

St. Luke, pray for us.

Father Joe Brandt

A VOCATION VIEW

Do not be afraid; have faith and trust the Lord’s call. Consider being a priest, brother, or sister. (Matthew 14:23-23)
Reflection by Rev. Leonard N. Peterson

Whenever the world watches a celebrity on trial, there comes that suspenseful time while we await the jury’s verdict. All the news outlets heighten the event by their promise to tell us the news ASAP. Their anchorpersons say things like “We will interrupt our usual programming to bring that verdict to you” and the excitement, such as it is, heightens as we wait. When it finally is announced, the verdict creates instant divides. Some of us are happy; some sad. Some angry; some pleased. Inevitably, life moves on for most of us. Our ordinariness picks up where it left off.

Today’s gospel selection from Matthew 14 sets up a series of some 17 incidents in which Jesus’ disciples come to a verdict on the subject of Jesus’ true identity. Of course, we are let in on the process so as to make our own decision. The Holy Spirit desires us to live out the consequences of our decision. Admittedly, that “verdict” of ours is life-altering. It will determine nearly all our earth bound choices. It will ultimately place us where we will experience our next life. So we dare not take it lightly.

St. Paul reveals how troubling it is for him to realize that his former co-religionists, the Jews, have come to their verdict about Jesus’ identity. It is not the same one he came to after his experience on the road to Damascus. That was uniquely personal.

There are clear traces of this sad mistake in the modern decision many people make, either to ignore Jesus because He causes discomfort, or to decide that His teaching is obsolete and out of touch with reality, and thereby providing a different way to discount Him.

Even with our technological sophistication, we are sometimes like toddlers in the field of religious knowledge. Anxious to learn all about the latest iteration of our cell phones, many of us, but not all, make little effort to deepen our knowledge of our faith and Church teaching and traditions. I cannot explain this other than to say that the latter requires more effort than some people are willing to make. As a result, they glom on to the latest media pronouncement as if it were the gospel. Afterward they render their verdict on Jesus and His Church. Recall how the Lord asked Saul the persecutor of Christians before he became Paul the missionary “Saul, why are you persecuting Me?” That last pronoun makes all the difference.

We don’t want to make this same mistake. Even after years assisting at Mass and hearing the Scriptures and homilies on them, we might start confining God’s appearance in our lives to the dramatic, such as earthquakes, hurricanes or fire. Usually He has come to us “in a tiny whispering sound.”

Translating that whisper into practical terms, I see God’s coming to us in persons, places and things all around us. Perhaps in a newscast item, or a novel, or a family member on the phone, or a doctor’s announcement to us. The list is almost endless.

Of course, we have to be careful about how we convey this truth to the young and the vulnerable of all ages. A little Scottish boy wouldn’t eat his prunes, so his mother sent him off to bed saying “God is angry with you.” Soon after the boy went to his room a violent storm broke out. Amidst flashes of lightning and peals of thunder, the mother looked into the boy’s room, worried that he would be terrified. When she opened the door she found him looking out the window muttering, “My, such a fuss to make over a few prunes!”

How does a busy person find time for spiritual growth? Sometimes, we feel like a perpetual motion machine—kids, sports, jobs, day care, house care, family obligations—the list goes on.

It’s a problem we’ve all faced. We’re exhausted, we’re stressed, we’re overbooked. Our schedules are hectic, and if we’re parents, we’re at the heart of it all, the engineer who makes it all run smoothly.

But underneath it all, do you sense a nagging desire for spiritual growth? God is inviting us. We want to somehow heed the injunction of Psalm 46: “Be still and know that I am God!”

Here are a few suggestions, mostly gleaned by trial and error.

First, don’t beat yourself up. Feeling guilty about not praying is probably a surefire way to avoid God. Instead, cultivate gratitude. Each day be aware of all for which you are grateful to God, beginning with the very life breath within you.

The medieval theologian Meister Eckhart said, “If the only prayer you ever say in your entire life is thank you, it will be enough.” Make a habit of little mini-prayers of gratitude throughout the day.

Second, try to incorporate prayer into the pauses of your life. A long red light? A checkout line that seems to be unmoving? Waiting in the school parking lot for your child? Take a deep breath and be present to God.

However, if you desire to strengthen your spiritual life, at some point you need to set aside time specifically for prayer. I’ve found the early morning to be the best time for me. If everyone else in the house is still asleep, it’s best.

But if a child or a spouse sees you sitting with Scripture or a lighted candle, you may feel interrupted but you’ve also just given great witness.

Don’t feel you ever “have enough time” to pray?

A pastor friend of mine used to repeat a homily yearly, but it always challenged me. Father Dan would take a large, clear glass jar, three quarters filled with rice, and try to add golf balls to fill the jar. He could never get all the golf balls in. Next, he would empty the jar and put the golf balls in first. Then he poured the same amount of rice over the golf balls and everything fit, the rice filling the curves and crannies around the golf balls.

The moral of his homily? If we make time for prayer first, everything else will fit. The important thing is to set a specific time and do your best to keep it. If you, like me, have ever said, “I’ll pray later,” you’ve probably found that “later” doesn’t materialize.

Making prayer a habit will eventually bear great fruit.

Another technique is to evaluate honestly the time you spend with screens, be it an hour on Facebook or an evening spent in front of the television. Certainly some of that time could be devoted to silence and prayer, if we’re intentional.

Sometimes we really need help settling into a quiet meditation. There are many online aids for this. www.sacredspace.ie, a joint apostolate of the Irish Jesuits and Loyola Press, provides daily guided prayer used by people all over the world. You choose the amount of time you give.

Creighton University provides daily reflections as well as other seasonal and retreat guidance at http://onlineministries.creighton.edu/CollaborativeMinistry/online.html.

Another great daily source is www.ignatianspirituality.com.

Most of these resources can be emailed to you daily.

If you prefer something you can hold in your hand, there are many booklets available, like “Living Faith,” which is sponsored by the Augustinians of the Assumption. This booklet provides the daily readings and a short meditation to help foster your own time with God. Check with your parish for other suggestions.

Think of this journey not as a rigid obligation but as an exciting invitation. God has great plans for you in 2017.
